AND GOD SAYS . . .

The men of Israel hid in caves and thickets, among the rocks, and in cellars and cisterns. (1 Samuel 13:6)

Kris Kubal, IFA Chief Program Officer, deeply concerned about the spiritual and political condition of America, writes:

There are moments when silence carries consequences. I believe the American Church is living in one of those moments right now.

For too many years, Christians were told that faithful citizenship and biblical engagement with government were somehow outside the proper boundaries of the Church. Pastors were warned away from subjects that might be considered "political. " Congregations learned to separate what happened on Sunday morning from what happened at the ballot. (box.https://ifapray.org/blog/how-would-our-founders-vote-in-these-midterms/)

As I was reading through 1 Samuel this week, I was struck by the parallel between the present condition in America and that of Israel under the reign of King Saul. In Saul's time the Israelites were terrified of the Philistines. Only King Saul and his son, Jonathon had swords to defend themselves. The Philistines continually mocked and threatened them. Thus the Israelites kept their heads down and avoided any conflict with the Philistines at almost any cost.

Fast forward to the state of the church in America. It seems that the church is almost as silent as the Israelites where in the days of King Saul. It is hiding in plain site, fitting in with the godless culture, and in many cases, even endorsing it. It metaphorically keeps it's head down to avoid as much conflict with the world as possible.

And what was the result for Israel? The kingdom fell. It makes me wonder, what will be the fate of America as a result of the silence and lack of involvement of the church in our country's future?

BARN OWL
JOE MUST GO

In a time of worry and fear, a rural Wisconsin newspaper editor gave up his comfort and peace of mind to stand up to a political bully

Leroy Gore started the Sauk Prairie Star newspaper in Sauk City, Wisconsin, in 1952. He described himself as a "thoroughly respectable, thoroughly conservative, thoroughly smug Republican country editor." He built his newspaper to a circulation of 3,200, good for a rural area. His newspaper gave him a comfortable living. Then in 1954 Gore decided he had to take a stand.
TIME magazine told his story in 1955.

Joseph McCarthy became a Republican U.S. Senator for Wisconsin in 1946. In 1950, McCarthy claimed he held a list of known communists in the U.S. State Department. He never produced the list, but he began a crusade against "communist influence" in the government. He made serious accusations without evidence, spreading fear across the country.

This period became known as "McCarthyism". Government investigations and hearings led to people losing their jobs and being blacklisted because they were suspected of agreeing with Communist ideas. McCarthy became a symbol of the political witch hunt. He ignored the right to a fair hearing and respect for individual rights. In the name of national security, his actions ruined the lives and careers of thousands of Americans.

Leroy Gore spoke up after McCarthy accused a U.S. Army general of protecting Communists and said the General was unfit to wear an Army uniform.

Gore wrote in his paper that all Wisconsinites had to act to remove McCarthy from the Senate. Wisconsin law allowed a recall election if 413,000 citizens signed a petition. Gore organized the "JOE MUST GO" campaign to recall the senator.

Gore's call brought a flood of support. He became a leader in the fight against McCarthy. He printed petitions and built a movement that finally collected 330,000 signatures. His efforts helped others overcome their fear. He did not reach the number needed for the recall. But the "Joe Must Go" clubs helped organize opposition to McCarthy across Wisconsin.

At the same time, televised hearings between the Army and McCarthy in 1954 showed the public McCarthy's bullying behavior. He began to lose political power. That year, the Senate formally condemned his actions. He was censured. McCarthy died in 1957.

Leroy Gore paid a price for speaking out. Advertisers withdrew their support from his newspaper. He lost one-fourth of his readers. He was brought to trial by the county prosecutor. Neighbors stopped talking to him and he lost friends. He sold the newspaper in 1955.

Years later, he told journalist Bill Wineke that he wondered if he started Joe Must Go because he believed in doing what was right or because he was driven to act and could not stop himself. Citizens can choose to simply watch events unfold - even when they disagree with what is happening. But it takes courage and sometimes great sacrifice to resist during terrible moments in history.
